Mkts find long runway in household savings shift

AMCs, mkt infra players seen compounding earnings on SIP flows

NIKITA VASHISHT
New Delhi, 16 April

A structural shift in household savings from physical assets to financial instruments is making analysts increasingly optimistic about the long-term growth outlook for the capital markets sector. They expect market infrastructure providers and asset management companies (AMCs) to see multi-year earnings expansion.

“Over the past decade, the assets under management (AUM) of the Indian mutual fund (MF) industry have scaled from ₹12.3 trillion in 2015-16 to ₹73.7 trillion in 2025-26 (FY26) — a 20 per cent 10-year compound annual growth rate (CAGR). Looking ahead, the industry stands at a compelling inflection point, with structural tailwinds poised to sustain its growth momentum,” said analysts at Emkay Global Financial Services in a sector initiation report.

A surge in retail participation, facilitated by digital transformation and a deepening investment culture, is set to transform the sector into a high-conviction play for institutional investors in the years ahead.

“We expect the Indian MF industry to deliver an AUM CAGR of about 17 per cent over the next decade, reaching ₹309 trillion by 2034-35, driven by healthy net inflows on the back of deepening investor penetration and improving stickiness,” the brokerage said.

‘Multi-decade runway’

According to Emkay Global, Indian AMCs are among the most efficient proxies for the institutionalisation of Indian wealth. They are witnessing a “secular megatrend catalysing sustained AUM growth”.

This is because the democratisation of investing is now deeply entrenched, with systematic investment plans (SIPs) acting as a “sticky and granular automated engine” for the markets. In March 2026, inflows via SIPs hit a record ₹32,000 crore.

On upswing

Nifty Capital Markets leaderboard

(On April 16)	Share price (₹)	Change MTD %

CDSL	1,367.80	22.19

This steady flow of domestic capital provides a stable valuation floor, allowing Indian AMCs to command higher multiples than global peers, supported by “strong brand equity, wide distribution, growth visibility, and superior profitability”.

“The mass democratisation of retail investing — bolstered by digital capabilities — has fuelled rapid growth in MF AUM, with retail investors (including high net worth individuals) contributing about 60 per cent to total AUM as of the third quarter (October-December/Q3) of FY26. The industry is shifting from episodic market timing to disciplined long-term wealth creation,” the brokerage observed.

Emkay Global maintains a bullish stance on high-quality AMC franchises with scalable, capital-light models. It has initiated a “buy” rating on HDFC AMC (target price ₹3,200), ICICI Prudential AMC (₹4,000), and Nippon Life India (₹1,150). It has assigned an “add” rating to Aditya Birla Sun Life AMC and UTI AMC, with target prices of ₹1,150 and ₹1,100, respectively.

While the asset management business has a highly scalable fixed-cost base, it faces top-line headwinds, driven by the Securities and Exchange Board of India’s total expense ratio slabs and the fast-growing, low-yield passive segment.

“However, operating leverage is likely to partly offset the dilution in revenue yields. Thus, profitability will be led by AUM growth,” the brokerage said.

In tandem with the asset management outlook, Axis Capital has initiated coverage on market infrastructure and utility players, describing them as “invisible engines” with “visible earnings”.

According to the brokerage, these entities offer a superior play on capital markets due to high entry barriers and a low-cost model that yields earnings before interest, tax, depreciation, and amortisation margins in the 40-50 per cent range.

Axis Capital noted that recent market corrections have made valuations attractive, particularly for registrar and transfer agents (RTAs), which face lower regulatory risks and benefit from revenue optionalities.

SENIOR LIVING PROJECTS

Assess developer’s record in delivering service-oriented housing

HIMALI PATEL

Developers of senior housing projects are scaling up operations and entering new cities in response to robust demand. Companies such as Ashiana Housing, Manasum Senior Living and Primus Senior Living, among others, are acquiring land parcels and expanding their footprint, according to a recent media report.

Demand drivers

A major demand driver is the growing share of the population aged 60 and above. “Rising life expectancy has increased the need for organised senior living facilities offering housing, medical support and wellness services,” says Vimal Nadar, national director, research, Colliers.

“The steady shift from joint families to nuclear households has left many elderly individuals without immediate support,” says Anantharam V Varayur, cofounder, Manasum Senior Living. Migration of the younger generation to other cities and countries has increased the need for such secure, professionally managed spaces for elderly family members. “Greater global exposure has made many Indians more receptive to the senior living models they have seen in developed markets,” says Rajagopal G, director and group chief executive officer (CEO), Serene Communities by Columbia Pacific.

The Covid-19 pandemic raised awareness regarding seniors’ safety. “It highlighted the risks of seniors living alone and increased the perceived value of health-focused community living,” says Akash Pharanade, managing director, Pharanade Spaces.

Changing expectations among today’s retirees are leading to premiumisation. “Higher disposable incomes and a stronger focus on health and wellness are supporting demand for such offerings,” says Nadar.

Relief from chores

Senior living projects offer a safe and secure environment through round-the-clock security, controlled access, and emergency response mechanisms. They also offer healthcare support.

“Residents benefit from a maintenance-free environment where housekeeping, dining and repairs are taken care of,” says Varayur. These projects are equipped with age-friendly features. “Community spaces and organised programmes help mitigate loneliness,” says Anil Godara, founder and managing director, J Estates.

High service and maintenance costs

One drawback of such housing schemes is the high monthly maintenance cost. “These often escalate significantly over time,” says Abhishek Kumar, Sebi-registered investment advisor and founder, SahajMoney.com.

These properties may also offer lower capital appreciation as the resale market is limited to a specific age group. Children who inherit them may be barred from residing in them if they do not meet the age requirement. “Deve-

Mistakes to avoid

- Do not rely blindly on marketing claims or sales pitches; do independent research
- Avoid impulse purchases or pressure-driven decisions
- Test actual service quality, including food, housekeeping and medical response
- Avoid locations distant from multi-specialty hospitals or your social support systems
- Scrutinise the legal fine print on security deposits in case of change in management lopers sometimes impose steep transfer fees or profit-sharing clauses, which erode the financial gains of heirs,” says Kumar.

Check developer, operator track record

Check for clarity of title, Rera registration and escalation clauses in the event of delays or deficiencies. All approvals should be in place.

Assess the developer’s track record in delivering projects. “Evaluate competence in the delivery of service-oriented residential housing,” says Godara.

Buyers should assess how capable the operator is at delivering services consistently. “Operational competence is as important as construction quality in evaluating a senior living project,” says Varayur. Speak to existing residents for insights.

Understand the terms

Rajagopal suggests that buyers should review the services offered and seek clarity on maintenance and recurring costs. “In assisted living facilities, buyers should examine the quality of services that are contractually committed,” says Nadar.

Make sure that the project has a long-term contract with a reputable healthcare service provider. Godara suggests that buyers should examine transparency in governance and the long-term sustainability of services. “They should also assess transparency in billing and the record of fee increases in the developer’s other senior living projects,” says Kumar. The resale and inheritance clauses must be checked thoroughly.

What families must get right while executing a Will

A critical step after a person’s death is establishing legal control over their estate. Executors who divide property before settling debts, validating the Will, or documenting assets risk litigation, delays and personal liability.

Common mistakes

Legal experts highlight several recurring errors made by

- executors:
 - Premature distribution of assets before settling debts and taxes
 - Failure to maintain records, leading to mistrust among beneficiaries
 - Delays in initiating execution, which can invite legal challenges
 - Ignoring creditor claims or not issuing public notices
 - Conflict of interest, especially when the executor is also a major beneficiary

Families should ensure the following are readily available while executing a Will:

- Original Will
- Death certificate
- PAN and Aadhaar of the deceased and heirs
- Property documents and title deeds

- Bank statements, demat accounts, investment records
- Insurance policies and nomination details
- Proof of liabilities such as loans and taxes

A well-executed Will can ensure smooth transfer of wealth, but a poorly handled one can lock families into years of legal disputes.
